

PLEAD GUILTY IN COURT

Detroit Is Named Convention City By Legionnaires

Resolutions Are Adopted
 Condemning Communism in United States

LABOR HEAD SPEAKS

Says Duty of Legion and Labor to Work For Economic Relief

BOSTON, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The serious matters of a national convention occupied the attention of the American Legion here Wednesday. The outstanding events of a five hour session were:

The choice of Detroit as the 1931 convention city.

The adoption of resolutions condemning communism and regretting and condemning the acts of vandalism by hoodlums who took advantage of the convention to spread disorder, Tuesday night.

The speeches of General Henri Gouraud of France, Major General Sir William Hickie of Ireland, admiral William S. Benson, naval chief during the war; General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, and William R. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Admiral Benson Speaks

Admiral Benson now retired, urged the Legionnaires to study and eradicate the causes of crime and to vindicate the laws. Sir William brought the greetings of the Irish veterans. General Gouraud represented the government of France and reviewed the association of France and the United States during the years. Green warned against forces at work to commercialize unemployment for the purpose of breaking down our government. Hines expressed the hope that an effective plan of veteran relief would be evolved.

The resolution dealing with communism and that condemning the activities of the hoodlums were cheered. In the first the Legion endorsed the appointment of a special congressional committee investigating communists in the country and urged that after it had reported, congress enact legislation to end all communistic activities in the United States. The second rebuked those who tipped over automobiles, set fires and engaged in street brawls with policemen and civilians late Tuesday night and early Wednesday. The Legion said many of the ruffians posed as Legionnaires.

Labor Optimistic

Green said his organization had been optimistic regarding the unemployment situation and had looked forward with hope for a trend toward the return of prosperity. He added, however, that forthcoming winter was much economic distress and it was the duty of labor and the Legion to work together to bring relief. He declared there was a permanent relief for unemployment and it was in the application of American good sense and American good judgment.

After referring to the element he said was at work trying to break down the government, he said:

"We will not pull down our national structure to satisfy those who present a visionary remedy. We will work out our problems in accordance with American tradition and American welfare. We believe we have the best form of government on the face of the earth and believe it deserves the loyalty of every good American."

Admiral Benson told the Legionnaires it was their duty to serve their country, protect its institutions and to perpetuate its freedom.

Because a suspect held in the kidnaping of Dr. Frank L. McPhail of Highland Park, Mich., "squealed" following his arrest, three men accused of trying to hold the physician for $10,000 ransom have been arrested by Detroit police. This picture shows Dr. McPhail (seated at the left) telling Assistant Prosecutor Van Ring (right) of the kidnaping, while his father, Dr. Waincomb McPhail, looks on. Inset is Frank Sabino, the suspect who "squealed."

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Establishment of safeguards to prevent the fraudulent enactment of a bill by forging journal entries or other means was the subject of Proposed Amendment No. 23, to be voted upon at the general election November 4.

This amendment is one of seven sponsored by the Arkansas Taxpayers Protective Association.

The proposed amendment would provide that no bill could become law until the journal entries showing its passage in each house of the legislature are entered on the legislative records and such journals filed with the secretary of state before adjournment of the legislature at which the bill was passed.

Another important provision of the proposed amendment is that which would permit introduction of evidence other than journal records, which would bear on the authenticity of a measure where suit is filed to annul an act. Several supreme court decisions have held that journal entries showing passage of a bill constituted a presumption that all laws and rules were complied with in its passage.

There were charges following the last legislature that certain measures were "enacted" by changing the jour-

Mr. Wilson's telegram announced that he was leaving Boston tonight on his trip home, probably arriving here Saturday.

"Sixteen."

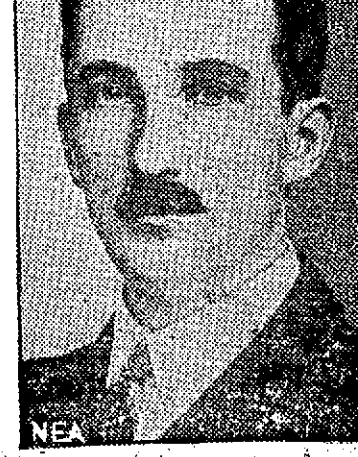

"How many handbills has he got there?"

"Fifteen thousand."

"One day in jail for each handbill," the court pronounced.

Herndon Talks on Fire Prevention

Retired Hope Chief, and Halliburton, Address Kiwanis Club

A fire prevention program was arranged for Thursday's regular meeting of the Kiwanis Club at Hotel Barlow, by Jess Harbin, who had charge of the program for the meeting.

Rufus V. Herndon, retired chief of the local department, pointed out that 75 per cent of fires were preventable, and that fires are costing Americans an average of about $5.50 per capita per year. This compares with an annual cost of about $1 in England. Arkansas fires cost about $3.50 per capita per year, he said. He told how Hope was securing much lower fire insurance rates than in recent years on account of its modern and loyal fire fighting organization. He told how he joined the department in April, 1905, at which time the city fire fighting equipment consisted of a two-wheeled hose cart, pulled by hand power over unimproved streets. Later a horse and cart were installed, but the first thing for the fire department to do when the gong sounded, was to go to the pasture to catch the horse.

Later a team of horses was purchased by the city, and maintained at the fire barn in readiness for any emergency. Mr. Herndon pointed out that firemen were underpaid, in his opinion, since it frequently costs the fire ladders their pay to clean up their clothes after attending fires.

Joe Halliburton, assistant chief, told how fire losses cost Hope an average of $21,000 per year. He pointed out that children are less careless of fire hazards than grown-ups. He told of the small mains in some sections of the city which make it difficult for the fire department to get enough water to cope with large fires.

Nine boats went down at the Rpgs Bros. boat landing, but all were recovered and motors repaired.

Woman Urges That Paving Be Tinted

Believes Concrete Paving Should Be Made Some Restful Color

SEATTLE, Oct. 9.—(UP)—In this day when men have succumbed to the urge of color, adopting varied hues for their clothing, when the color scheme is all-important in automobile bibles, homes and buildings, it is considered only natural that somebody should suggest pavement tinted to blend with the landscape.

Mrs. Grace M. Burt was the first to advance the plan in Seattle.

"We hear of restful colors everywhere except with reference to our concrete paving," she told the city council.

"How much more pleasant it would be if we could emerge from attractive buildings onto delicately tinted rose or green pavements, instead of the glaring gray or white grease-streaked thoroughfares we now have to gaze upon."

Mrs. Burt urged that the commission consider using a green tone in paving a new proposed boulevard.

Schoen told him he already made up ones wouldn't do and asked for three to read "You May Hunt on This Farm."

Mild 'Jim' Byrnes Beats Stormy Senator Blease

COLUMBIA, S. C. (P)—History did not repeat itself in the South Carolina senatorial race.

James F. Byrnes, who once met defeat at the hands of Senator Cole L. Blease, reversed the order of things this year when he became the nominee of the democratic party, which is equivalent to election.

From court stenographer to the United States senate—that is, briefly stated, the career of the nominee.

Leaving school at the age of 14 to support his mother, Byrnes entered a law office in Charleston where he picked up a knowledge of stenography.

Byrnes studied law in his spare time and was admitted to the South Carolina bar in 1903. He first entered politics when he was elected solicitor of the second district in 1908. Two years later he went to congress and served 14 years in the house of representatives.

In retiring Blease to private life, South Carolina takes from the senate one of its most colorful figures, an old-fashioned fire-eater, who injected only a ghost of his old tactics into the primary campaign.

It replaces him with the quiet dignified Byrnes, who ignored political animosities in the campaign and confined himself largely to economic questions.

Byrnes is 51 years old, married, but has no children. He is a member of the Episcopal church, the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He is also a 32nd degree Mason.

JAMES F. BYRNES

Butter and Eggs Drop to Low Level at Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—(P)—Future deliveries of butter and eggs reached new bottom levels on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange today. November deliveries of eggs struck 20 3-8 cents a dozen, wholesale, and November delivery of butter slid down to 34 5-8 cents per pound, both 3-4 cents lower than yesterday.

A condition of "just too many eggs" was reported as explaining the situation in egg trading. Egg weakness was largely responsible for the drop in butter.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Adventure enters the life of CELIA MITCHELL, 17, when she leaves the shelter of her home in New York with her father, JOHN MITCHELL, and her aristocratic friend, EVELYN PARSONS.

CELIA MITCHELL, her mother, divorced Mitchell and married a man who was a successful business man. She is now a widow. EVELYN PARSONS, a young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore, Celie promised to be loyal to his love.

She is lonely in her new home. Mitchell takes EVELYN, a beautiful girl, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons considers Celie a means to win Mitchell's affection and agree. She invites the girl to her long island home for a week.

TOD JORDAN, fascinating but with a dubious reputation, is attracted to Celie, and she responds to his advances. When the other guests leave Celie confides her visit.

CELIA MITCHELL, actually prominent, invites her to attend a swimming party. Celie nervously escapes drowning and is rescued by Jordan. Her father hears of the affair and insists the girl must return home for a week, leaving Jordan chills.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

TOD JORDAN stood smiling at Celie from the open French windows. He looked handsome in his dinner clothes.

"Good evening," he said. "Thought I'd find you here. Mind if I come out?"

"Of course not. There's a fine breeze. Here — won't you sit down?"

She made room for him on the wicker seat. Jordan leaned back comfortably.

"I just dropped around to see how you felt after your—damp adventure. Evelyn says you're recovered."

"Perfectly. Did she tell you that?"

"I don't know. She says you're driving into town in the morning. Is that what you mean?"

"Yes." Celie shook her head mournfully. "Father says I have to come. That's why I'm out here—saying goodbye to the garden and the stars and the sky. I hate leaving it all behind!"

"You do? Can't say that I blame you. It's a beautiful place." He paused, then continued in a lower voice, "I'll never forget it."

The way he spoke made the girl turn instinctively. Light from the living room cast a broad, golden ribbon across the porch floor, but the dyan on which they sat was in shadow. Jordan could not see the delicate coloring that had risen in Celie's cheeks.

"You like it, too?" she asked in a quiet voice.

Jordan shrugged. "Like it? I—oh, I'm a fool, guess. Celie, you know the other evening when we were dancing here I—well, I don't know—I just can't forget about it, that's all. It must have been my mistake, but you see I thought you were beginning to care for me a little. Next day you seemed different and I decided I was wrong. It doesn't change the memory, though."

His hand closed over Celie's. "Was I—altogether mistaken?" He breathed the words slowly.

Celia had no answer. Gently he drew her nearer.

"You're not answering," Jordan protested. "Tell me, Celie! It's terribly important!"

She edged from him.

"You know that I like you," she said. "I'd be awfully grateful if I didn't after this afternoon."

"But I don't want you to be grateful! I want to know if you feel the way I do about—the other night. It's the only time since we've met that I've had you alone. Celie, do you care?"

His arm was gone around her. Jordan's face was close to the girl's. His dark eyes sought hers compellingly. She could not look away. Celie felt the warm rush of color to her cheeks. Tod Jordan's handsome eyes so near—Tod Jordan's lips—

It happened quickly. A kiss sweeping aside everything else in the world. Tlingling, delicious, terrifying!

Breathless, the man and girl stared at each other.

"Oh, Celie!" He tried to take her in his arms again, but Celie protested.

"What is it? What's the matter—dear?"

She shook her head without speaking.

"But Celie, I couldn't help it. I'm mad about you! Oh, won't you understand—!"

The girl arose and walked to the railing of the porch. Jordan followed.

"You mean," he said huskily, "you don't care about me?"

"It isn't that," Celie hesitated. "Then what is it? What else in the world can make any difference? Why, Celie—you're trembling!"

Jordan took both of the girl's hands in his. She looked up at him with frightened eyes. Their gaze met. Then Jordan dropped her hands and stepped back.

"Someone else?" he asked in the same throaty tone.

"I—don't know."

"What do you mean by that? Don't you know it if there's someone else you care more for? Tell me, Celie. Why do you want to keep me waiting?"

Jordan was a romantic figure as he stood there. His dark eyes seemed to glow. His pose and everything about him was melodramatic. His perfect-fitting dinner clothes must have cost three times what Barney Shields had ever paid for one of his ready-made suits.

The girl was repentant.

"I don't know, Tod," she said slowly. "I—I thought there was

Mrs. Q. McAdams With L. C. Burr Co.

Local Woman to Manage Piece Goods in New Department Store

The appointment of Mrs. Q. McAdams of Hope, as manager of the piece goods department of the new L. C. Burr & Co. department store to be opened here Friday, October 10, was announced today by store executives.

For the past five years, Mrs. McAdams has managed the piece goods department of the J. C. Penney department store. She has a local reputation as an expert in judging qualities of various materials, and her advice is often sought by the shoppers of this territory.

"Mrs. McAdams' chief duties will be to study the piece goods demands of the women of Hope and then personally select the patterns and materials which are most desirable."

One of the major policies of L. C. Burr & Co., is the employment of local people, according to Manager Swader. "With the exception of the Supervisors here for the opening, all the employees are Hope people." Mr. Swader has made Hope his permanent residence since receiving the management of this store.

The policy of employing local people is mutually profitable. The city benefits by new employment for its citizens and this extra payroll is of course, mostly spent right here in the city. We benefit from employing local people because they best understand the needs, desires, and character of the shopping community. In many economic considerations along the process they have a personal following of acquaintances and friends who prefer to buy from someone known to them."

Plan Revived For Argentine Road

Pan American Conference Includes It on the Program

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(UP)—The Pan American railway project, to link New York and Buenos Aires by 10,000 miles of steel, will be given a new lease of life at the fourth Pan American commercial conference, scheduled here October 5-12, 1931.

Friends of the project have secured its inclusion in a revised conference program approved by a committee consisting of Minister Alfaro of Panama, Minister Alfaro of Nicaragua, and Charde d'Affaires Jose T. Baron of Cuba; soon to be submitted to the interested governments.

During the last decade political attention to the great continental railway was subordinated because of the transending interest in the Pan American highway and also because the chief friends of the railway differed as to the relative merits of the Andean and the East-of-the-Andes routes.

The force of these objections has been minimized, however, because of the evident fact that a New York-to-

Ends Piles Quick

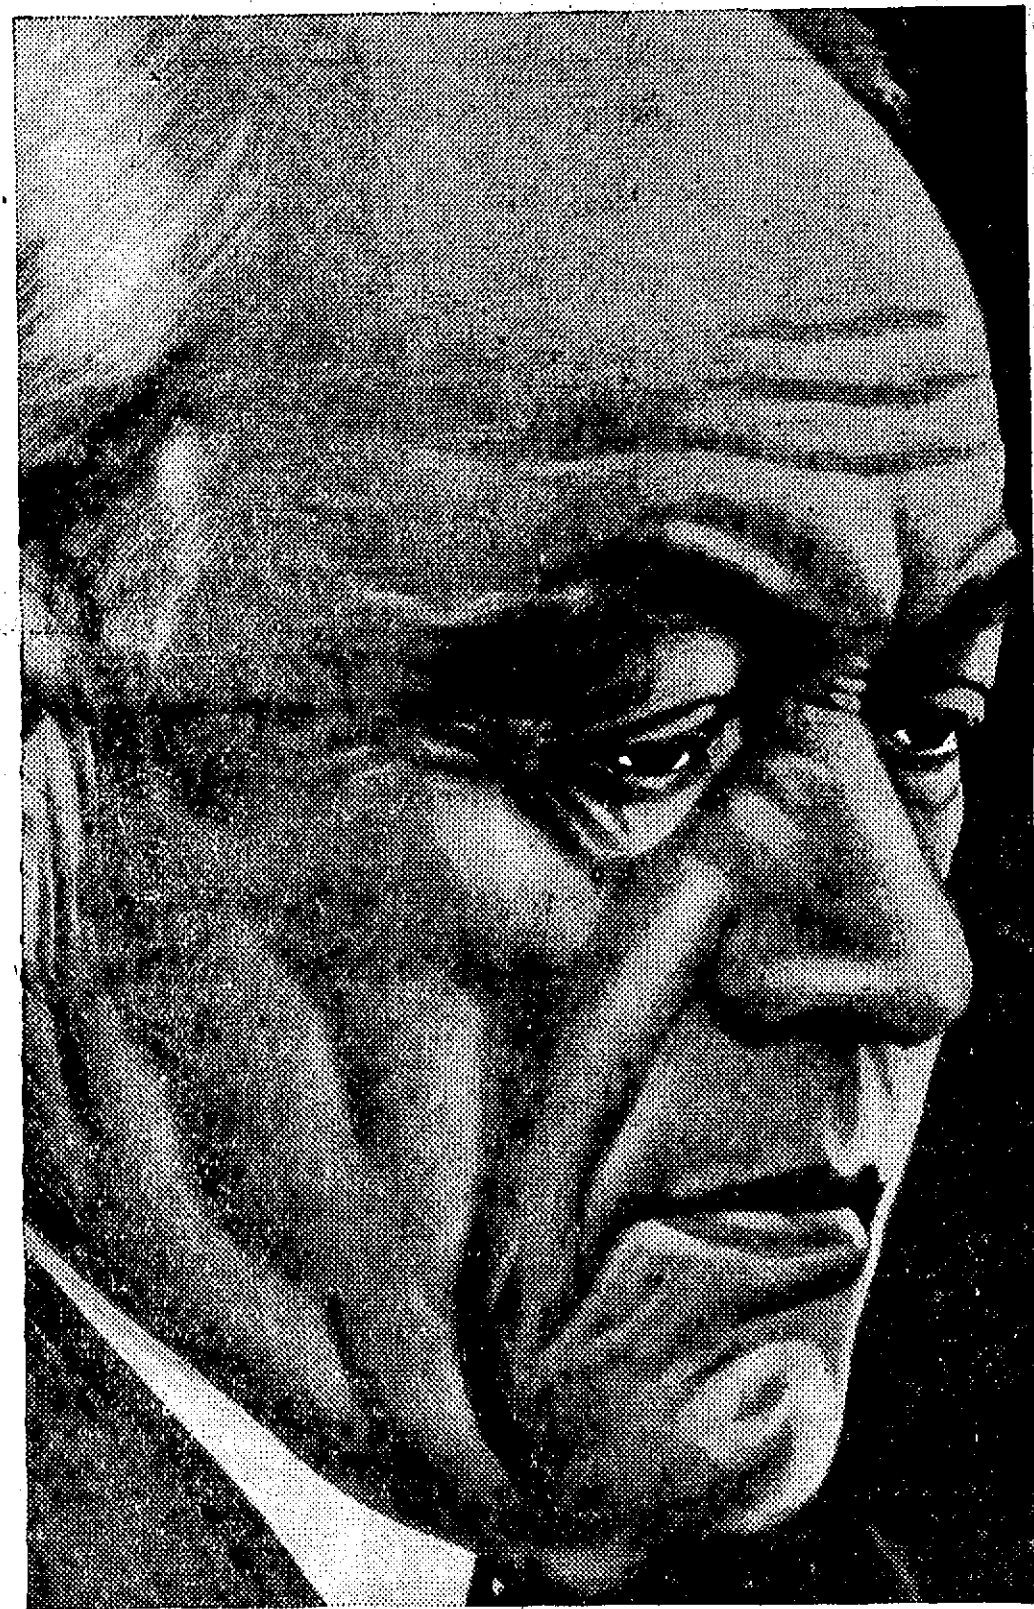

Pile suffers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. Cutting and external remedies can't do this—an internal medicine must be used. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. B. Leonard, a specialist, succeeds, because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere, and has such a wonderful record of success right in this city that Ward & Son says to every Pile sufferer, try HEM-ROID at my risk. It must end all Pile agony, or you get your money back. Ad.

Helium May Prevent Divers' 'Bends'

Scientists hope helium-charged air being fed experimentally to two white rats (top) in special cage (below) will prevent painful "bends" that attacks divers.

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Air made mostly of helium is under test at Purdue university to learn whether it will prevent one of man's most painful diseases, the "bends" of divers.

A pair of white rats, named Damon and Pythias, are taking the preliminary tests, breathing the new atmosphere.

This air contains the normal amount of oxygen, but its nitrogen, which forms nearly 80 per cent of ordinary air, is extracted and helium substituted. Nitrogen is the apparent cause of "bends."

It gets into the blood, seemingly forced there by the compressed air in which deep sea divers and caisson men work. Then when the pressure is reduced as the men rise, this excess nitrogen is thought to form into bubbles that cause the disease. Reaching the heart, brain or spinal cord, they are fatal.

The Purdue work is undertaken by Gerald W. Daubenspeck, a graduate, working in the biology department under Dr. Howard E. Sanders and in cooperation with the Helium Company of Louisville.

The hope that helium may not be as bad as nitrogen is based upon the fact that it is less soluble than nitrogen. Helium is odorless, tasteless and colorless. It also is inert, which means that it does not combine readily with other elements, a quality which accounts for its safety from explosion when used in dirigibles.

The first step at Purdue is to learn whether the helium atmosphere harms the rats. White rats are the animals nearest like humans in metabolism, the processes of producing energy.

The fact that helium, nitrogen, argon and other ordinary gases of the air may be mixed in new and artificial proportions without causing death of animals has been reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. J. Willard Hershey of McPherson College, Kansas.

Writers Rally
JOE MCCARTHY may have been given a great big gate as manager of the Chicago Cubs, but he has friends. Rallying around him in his moment of distress are the fans with the typewriters. In every city of the big league, words in defense of Joe have been poured into the sports pages. Friendship is the answer. Joe McCarthy, in his six years of managing the Chicago Cubs, has been the friend of the boys who click the portables and make the box scores in the press box. He doesn't have to go very far to know the reason. Joe always treated the baseball writers fairly and courteously. More than that, he has gone out of his way to see that they got every break. There was news that McCarthy would leave them, they got it. You always felt yourself on an equal footing when you talked to Joe. That helps. A great many of the league managers condescend to be interviewed. They let you know their time is limited. I could name about six bosses in the league who talk to newspapermen only under restraint. McCarthy imparted to you no sense of his own importance. I know of no other major league manager who has found such favor with the writers.

Invite Him to New York
NEARLY every baseball news writer and column writer in New York has taken upon himself in the last few days to invite Joe to become manager of the Yankees. They even carried the matter to the point of almost wholly neglecting the feelings of Bob Key, about the whole thing. In New York and many other major league cities, the writers protested the public repudiation that Mr. Wrigley's curt and sudden dismissal of his servant carried with it. It has been pointed out in columns after columns how Mr. Wrigley brought Joe from Louisville and made him manager of a team that had finished in the cellar in 1925. The team had to be rebuilt. It was pointed out that it took Connie Mack 14 years to rebuild the A's to championship strength. McCarthy, though, was successful from the start. "He took a Class AA ball club," said one writer, "and it was a card-playing, hard-drinking crew of misfits, and transformed it within a few months to a first division team." The Cubs regained their place in 1933, they

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
BILL BINGHAM, director of athletics at Harvard, addressed the freshman class a night or two ago, and thus spoke he: "During the year we shall engage in no less than 375 intercollegiate games. The prestige of the college does not depend on any of these contests. No one will accuse you of having poor spirit if you prefer to spend a Saturday afternoon at the library rather than to attend a football game. . . . No coach will urge you to play any game for the glory of dear old Harvard. . . . Does anybody remember the days when coaches spoke thus: 'No matter whether you can play or not, be down at that field, cheering the boys on to victory'? . . . That line about going to the library instead of the football field Saturday afternoon sounds well . . . but do they allow you to take your dasks to the library?"

finished third. The next year they won the pennant. McCarthy took a last place club and kept it in the first division for five consecutive years."

Bobcats to Meet Waldo Here Friday

Coach Wilkins Reports the Team in Good Shape and Ready to Go

The Hope high school Bobcats have continued to practice regularly regardless of the weather this week. While work-out has been impossible on the field at Fair Park an account of deep mud, the ground at the school building has been utilized for the purpose and the Cats have continued to improve their plays and formations.

Last week's game left the team still intact, but Mat Reeves is still on the bench because of sickness and an injured foot. He will not be in his regular position as center this week but expects to be in shape to work out a little and appear in the next game.

Coach Wilkins has a little surprise he is going to spring on local fans that still remains an unknown quantity. "Tiger" Rowe, from up at Washington, and incidentally a cousin of "Schoolboy" Rowe who still makes football, basketball, track and golf history in El Dorado high is going to be presented this week in the role of halfback. "Tiger" never saw a football until about three weeks ago, and as for knowing the game—football vernacular was as foreign to him as was Cicero's orations; however when Coach gives him the ball with instructions to carry it to the goal across the field he refuses to let a matter like a dozen or so football players prevent him from carrying out the coach's orders. Wilkins says that if he was sure "Tiger" would always run in the right direction when he got in a game that he would have the solution to some more of his coaching problems.

Friday the Bobcats draw their opposition from another part of the district when the high school, reputed as being one of the strongest, eleven in South Arkansas journeys here to meet the Bobcats in their third home game. Waldo has about the same record for the season that Hope has, and the clash between these schools will do much toward deciding how the home team is going to rate for district honors.

Friday's game will be refereed by Travis Thomas, former captain of the University of Arkansas Razorbacks.

a decided asset to the business section of Hope. The front is of green and black tile with tan and green tile corridors.

The new store's interior is pleasing in appearance and will delight those who attend the opening day Friday. Light walnut woodwork is accentuated by background decorations of light gray with trimmings of green and black.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after cold or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

L. C. Burr & Co. Will Open New Department Store Here Friday

Many Local People Employed by Firm

Manager Swader Completes Installation Work and New Department Store Will Greet Local Public in "Open House" Friday and Saturday

Hope's newest department store—L. C. Burr & Co.—will open Friday morning at Second and Elm streets. The former stand of Bryant & Co. has been remodeled, and new fixtures have been installed to create a brilliant new store with scores of departments. Manager Swader and a corps of supervisors and trainees have been working for more than a month preparing stock for display in the big new department store which holds its "open house" Friday and Saturday, October 10-11.

One of the major policies of L. C. Burr & Co., according to Manager Swader, is to employ local help in every instance possible. Except for the supervisors and trainees sent to Hope to help open the local store, all the employees hired for the big opening Friday and Saturday will be Hope people.

"This policy of employing local help," said Mr. Swader, "is not only a policy to assist in and promote the prosperity and general welfare of every town. We also know that local employees invariably give the most satisfactory service."

"We realize that our local salespeople have a personal following of acquaintances and friends who will prefer to buy from someone they know. We want this store to be a real local institution and one of the quickest ways to accomplish this is to fill our store with an atmosphere of friendliness."

Local people who are assisting on the sales force of the new store this week are as follows:

Mrs. Fay C. Russell, Mrs. Garrett Story, Mrs. C. McAdams, Miss Florence Risdon, Miss Pauline Sanford, Miss Dorothy Wright, Miss Virginia Fitzsimmons, Miss Frances Huntley, Mrs. Clifford Byers, Miss Elizabeth White, Miss Annie Sue Anders, Mrs. D. M. Stuart, Mrs. Edwin Ward, Mrs. B. L. Wellborn, Harry Westerman, Dallas Bowles, Orville White, J. D. Hedrix, Otis Langston.

New York State Starts Prison Classification

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(UP)—A uniform classification of inmates of New York state prisons, to be used as a basis for a report of Gov. Roosevelt's special committee investigating prisons and prison conditions, is under way.

Dr. Victor Branham, first deputy state commissioner of correction inspected Auburn prison recently. He said inmates will be classified as to whether they should be kept in their cells, housed in dormitories or room type cells, used on prison farms or road camps, or assigned to industrial positions.

Inventor Turns Prize Over to Air Society

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(UP)—An inventor, Alexander Yevlev, who won a government prize of 50,000 rubles for his work on aviation improvement, has turned the whole sum over to the Chemical and Aviation Defense Society.

Yevlev specified that 25,000 rubles should be used to assist inventors. The society had extended help to him when he was still unknown and unrecognized.

Future Generals at Great Britain's West Point

U. S. army cadets at West Point are said to be "the best dressed men in the world," but how about these future generals at England's Royal Military College at Sandhurst, cradle of British army officers since 1779? These cadets are shown at their morning exercises in the striped blazers and quail skull caps which have for years been the regulation dress for this part of their training.

Mrs. Fay Russell Joins Burr Store

Hope Woman Will Manage New Fashion Department Here

Executives of the L. C. Burr & Co. department store, to be opened here Friday, October 10, today announced the appointment of Mrs. Fay Russell, 919 Main street, as manager of the fashion department.

"Mrs. Russell has had an exceptional background of experience and training," said Mr. Swader, manager, "and she is well qualified to select styles and quality for this store."

Mrs. Russell will, in actuality, be the local representative of a New York fashion buying department and will advise them of the individual selections and styles preferred by the women of this city.

said manager Swader, "to meet the requirements and needs of each community. We believe that the most effective, practical and economical plan is for our New York buyers to make their purchases considering both the current modes and the styles desired by the women for whom they are buying."

Mrs. Russell is widely known locally as an authority on fashions, colors and materials. Many local shoppers are accustomed to asking her advice before purchasing any hat or dress.

"The styles this season are most interesting," said Mrs. Russell. Since the new styles first came out there has been a decided reaction in favor of the more practical even hem line.

"The New Fleck Crepes, which are equally appropriate for street, office and school, are becoming more popular every day," said Mrs. Russell, "also plain flat crepes and the delightful print crepes are being worn quite a bit this time." Deep yoke effects are prominently featured.

The predominating colors in coats this season are black, green and autumn brown. The Princess line is becoming the policy of this organization.

in featured in the new style of dress coat. The youthful figure is accentuated by the graceful belt line. All of these styles will be on display together with the very newest modes of sport coats in which tweed is the favorite material, Friday, October 10.

Russian Railroad Wrecks Frequent

More Than One Hundred More Deaths This Year Than Last

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(UP)—The disastrous growth of railroad accidents in the Soviet Union in recent months is indicated by incomplete yet sufficiently alarming figures just made public in the railway workers' organ, Gudok.

In the third quarter of the business year, April through July, 157 persons were killed and 435 seriously wounded in railroad wrecks. At least 612 engines and over 5,000 cars were wrecked. The corresponding figures for the first quarter of the year (October-December, 1929) were 57 killed, 516 wounded, 408 engines and 5,158 cars damaged.

The total financial losses through railroad accidents for the first nine months of the year are estimated at 5,000,000 rubles.

These accidents have become especially numerous and costly in terms of human lives and property losses in the last months. The press publishes news about a few of the more shocking wrecks only and usually covers their magnitude with general phrases such as "many victims."

Nevertheless even these fragmentary reports reveal a serious situation. The authorities place the blame upon the lack of labor discipline and in some instances upon actual sabotage. The unusual load of freight and passengers to which the Soviet railroad system has been subjected with the headlong expansion of industry explains much of the trouble.

"So you've put Fred off till December?"

"Yet, I told him I wouldn't give him a definite answer till then."

"Why not till then?"

Giant U. S. Air Liners Safe From Fate of R-101

By ISRAEL KLEIN
NEA Service Writer
AKRON, O., Oct. 8.—The fate that befell the R-101 over Beauvais, France, on its first long distance flight, will never strike the Los Angeles, the 5,500,000-cubic foot super-airship, Akron, which is being built here for the United States Navy.
With positive certainty, Lieutenant Thomas G. W. Settle, inspector of aircraft, who is representing the Navy here during the new ship's construction, and a recognized authority on lighter-than-air craft, dispels any fears for the American airships that might arise from what happened in France Sunday morning.
The Safety of Helium
The reason for Lieutenant Settle's certainty lies in the fact that the American airship now afloat and that being built, as well as the ZRS-5 which is planned for future construction, have helium as their lifting gas. Helium is a non-inflammable gas extracted from certain natural gas fields, particularly in Texas and Oklahoma. Its resultant safety against fire or explosion, such as caused the R-101 disaster, gives any ship in which it is a part a factor of safety of primary importance.
The Los Angeles can't possibly burn up or explode," says Lieutenant Settle. "Neither will the Akron, when it is completed. The United States has been fortunate in having large sources of this gas, while it is extremely rare and costly elsewhere. Germany, England and the other countries, therefore, have had to use hydrogen, a highly inflammable and therefore dangerous gas to lift their ships."
Hydrogen is more buoyant than helium, so that less is needed to carry a specified weight. But the increased safety of the helium ship is worth the extra cost of building it larger for the same load capacity as a hydrogen ship.
Shows Hydrogen's Dangers
The real cause of the R-101's destruction will not be known for some time, until an official investigation is made. But, the fact that the ship burned up, or exploded, is enough to show the dangers of a hydrogen airship.
The British had believed they had a good safety feature in the use of heavy oil burning Diesel engines, which avoided the use of highly inflammable gasoline. Lieutenant Settle says: "That is an important factor in airship safety, but no ship is wholly safe unless it has non-inflammable helium as its lifting gas."
There is hardly a probability that the hydrogen gas in the R-101 blew up of its own accord, because the cells in the ship are constantly inflating and deflating. If the gas filled the cells to capacity and threatened to inflate beyond its limit, the automatic "overpressure" valves would release enough hydrogen to prevent the explosion of a cell.
There are leaks, however, in the gas cells of airships, Lieutenant Settle admits, that can't be stopped up altogether, and such a leak might have been ignited from some cause or other.
Doubts Storm Caused It
If the ship struck a storm, Lieutenant Settle can't believe it was shattered, as was the Shenandoah in southern Ohio, in 1923, because the R-101 is supposed to have been the most sturdy built ship in existence. Lightning might have played a part in the calamity, however.
The fate of the Shenandoah is a remarkable example of the safety assured by the use of helium as lifting gas. Although this ship was broken

Lord Thomson, British air minister, one of the 11 passengers to perish in the explosion of the R-101, is shown here on the steps leading to the cabin of the British dirigible as he went aboard for a previous test flight over England.

Ancient Gods Offer Babes As Sacrifices

Field-Oxford Expedition Finds Evidence in Kish
CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—(UP)—Child sacrifice was a part of the religious rites in ancient Kish some 2,500 years ago, according to evidence unearthed by the Field Museum-Oxford University Joint Expedition to Mesopotamia.
Henry Field, assistant curator at Field Museum of Natural History, in the October number of Field Museum News, describes the excavations, which during the past eight years has uncovered a large part of Kish, believed to be the seat of the world's earliest civilization, and dating back 5,000 years.
"During the excavations, in the Babylonian levels which are attributed to the middle of the first millennium before the Christian era, numerous pot burials of children were unearthed," writes Field. "The burials had been placed along the walls of the more important buildings and it seems plausible to suggest that these babies may have been sacrificed to propitiate the gods in whose honor the buildings were erected. The majority of the babies were female."
"Another curious discovery was made during work in the mound which contained an important Babylonian library of sun-baked tablets in cuneiform script. Slipper-shaped coffins of baked clay were found near the walls of buildings and beside several of the sarcophagi were the skeletons of dogs. This suggests the possibility that the favorite animal was buried beside his master to accompany his soul to the spirit world."
"Several small dogs were buried beside children, and these animals may have watched and guarded the primitive cradles. When a child was sacrificed, the dog was also sacrificed and buried beside his playmate so that he might continue to protect him in the world beyond the grave."

Colorado Expects Heavy Migration of Wild Ducks

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 9.—(UP)—Thousands of migratory ducks will come into Colorado this year from states which suffered heavily from the drought, Roland G. Prvin, state game and fish commissioner believes.
This shortage naturally will drive the ducks to a place where their food is more plentiful, in the opinion of Prvin. He expects them in Colorado as this state escaped the drought.

Crops in Russia Affect U. S. Market

Will Assume Bigger Role in 1931, Noted Writer Predicts MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—(UP)—With some six million peasant farms already merged into collectives and at least that many more likely to join in the next year, the world must take cognizance of a new form of agrarian production which undoubtedly will affect agriculture in other countries.

It is due to the collectives that the Soviet Union is able to export a considerable amount of grain this year. The extent of those exports is still a State secret, although figures are high as 2,500,000 tons have been mentioned. But it has been sufficient in any event to produce repercussions in the international grain market.
With the collectivized area doubled, this country seems certain to play an even more important role in the world grain business next year.
The collective is thought of abroad, mistakenly, as a sort of "commune," in which the farmers throw in everything they possess and draw out equal shares of the crops and the profits. Indeed, this misconception was widespread among the Soviet farmers themselves and caused a great part of last winter's troubles.
The mass of peasants did not relish the prospect of giving up their possessions and receiving in return only as much as the "biedniak" or poorest peasant, who invested nothing.
They met the situation in a direct manner by killing livestock and selling or destroying other possessions. They stripped themselves of worldly goods and entered the collective as "biedniaks."
In reality the collective is not at all the commune of share-and-share-alike plan. The incomes of members of the collectives are as various and unequal as those of private farmers. Farm labor on the collective is divided into categories, and the skilled farmer doing more important work receives higher pay than the ordinary farm hand.
In addition, five per cent of the total crops are set aside as a fund for the payment of dividends on investments by the peasant—meaning the cash, cattle, horses, implements, etc., which he contributed to the collective.
The disposition of the crops is one of the important problems still in the process of adjustment. The natural tendency of collective members is to hold back as much as possible for themselves. The natural tendency of government trusts is to exact as much as possible from collectives for feeding the cities, for export and for reserves. The adjustments are being worked out in practice with considerable friction.
The Commissariat of Agriculture was obliged to issue a manifesto calling upon collectives not to sabotage the government which brought them into being.
The first duty of the Kolkhozes (the Soviet term for collectives) is to pay the State for credits extended, machinery, seeds and other advances. While they may reasonably provide a seed fund, the balance should be turned over to the government at the fixed prices.
The proceeds of the sale of crops, after the division of a certain amount for the use of membership, are distributed to the members in accordance with the amount and quality of their labor.
high.
The home of the blizzard is in Adeline land in Antarctica. Here a yearly average of 50 miles per hour is maintained, and explorers record that an Adeline blizzard kept a speed of 107 miles an hour for eight hours with gusts running as high as 200 miles per hour. Houses buried under the snow were necessary to obtain these figures, the explorers having only their instruments projecting above the surface.

Nature Whims Have Queer Local Names

Nations of World Learn to Call Winds and Rains Queer Markers
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(UP)—In foreign countries it may be a buran, poonaga, or pampero, but here in the United States it's just a plain blizzard. Each country has its own name for its distinctive winds, but fewer than a dozen are recognized by meteorologists, says a report of the National Geographic Society.
Algeria dreads the coming of the chillis, Nicaragua looks out for daily chubascos in the summertime, Spain scorches under the heat of an African leveche, and Persia has resigned itself to the shamal. In America these winds are common but are hiding under what the foreigner would call "assumed names."
A visit to Australia would find many curious names for the winds. The cool breeze blowing in from the ocean would be a "Fremantle doctor," a rushing hurricane is a "Willy willy," and an American hot-weather thunderstorm has the nickname of "Cock-eyed Bob."
In the Far East there is the monsoon, a possession that has been known to halt the enthusiasm of the most ardent salt gathered in India. With the coming of monsoon downpours, the salt pans are now muddy pools, Bombay political gatherings have been stopped and Englishmen have taken to the hills for refuge. A monsoon originates in India, divides into two streams, one striking the inland and the other going up the Gangetic Valley where it spreads its torrents and prevents the peninsula from becoming another Sahara desert.
On the wing of this wind is carried the world's greatest rain-fall. On Cherrapunja, at the head of the Himalaya foothills, the monsoon drops more water than does any other wind in the world. In summer Cherrapunja lives in a nature-made shower bath, with 424 inches of rain falling a year, enough to fill an open tank 35 feet

China Turns Toward America, Article Says

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9.—(UP)—America has now succeeded to Great Britain's former position as the predominant foreign trade influence in China, J. B. Powell declares in his China Weekly Review article.
China now looks to Washington for tips on the international political situation, rather than to London," the article says.
"China looks to Wall Street for future financing and to America for technical advice. Large British public utilities in China, facing none-too-bright future, look to the United States for purchasers."

Youth Holds Record For Breaking Bones

BELLAIRE, O., Oct. 9.—(UP)—Billy Neuhart, II, of Avondale, still holds his record as the world's champion "bone breaker."
Last year Billy "made the front pages" when broken bones sustained through his childhood reached a total of 36. Not content with that Billy recently sustained a broken leg when he fell from a chair, raising the total to 37.

Private Yacht, Complete in All Details, Launched

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(UP)—A precedent for private yacht construction was believed to have been established at Bath, Me., when Joseph A. MacDonald's new yacht was launched ready for immediate sailing. The yacht was fitted with furniture, drapery, silverware, dishes and even food when it slipped down the ways. The vessel is 191 feet long and ranks among the first 20 largest private yachts in the world. Captain George Lewis and a crew of 21 men were aboard when it slid down the ways.

Looking Ahead

TODAY The Star presents one of the largest merchandising editions in the history of Hope.

Price quotations, which play so important a part in modern advertising, are particularly significant this fall because they indicate what is going on not only in the stores but in all lines of American business, in town and on the farm.

Wholesale prices have been dropping during the last twelve months. Commodity prices for the things that the farmer has to sell, have been going down. All of us have felt the effects of this decline. We have heard that "business is bad."

And yet, this thing has to happen once in a while. We have followed farm and town prices up and down all our lives. All of us make money when prices are going up. When they start down we try not to lose too much until the tide turns for the better again.

Prices are just about at bottom now. The farmer who has cotton to sell, or who tried to sell truck produce last spring, knows that farm commodity prices aren't going to be any lower than they were this year. By the same token, he knows that the price of the things which he buys in town, which has fallen along with the price of the things which he sells, isn't going to be any lower either.

Folks haven't been buying much for the last year. This fall they will start buying again—because Hope merchants are marking down their retail prices regardless what they paid for the merchandise at wholesale. Somebody takes this loss. The merchant takes it. But he expects to make it back again next year and the year after, because when the wholesale price is climbing he can mark up his cheaply-bought goods to conform with each new quotation, and in the long run may recover what he has lost today.

We have this encouragement to give all the farmer friends of The Star, that what is true of business in town is also true of business on the farm. We paid normal prices for pretty nearly everything that was planted on the farm this spring. But we didn't get normal prices for what our seed and fertilizer and labor produced this summer and fall. The result is that the crop which we plant next spring should come as cheap as any crop we have known since before the World war. We could hardly get less for our labors next fall, regardless what happens, and we certainly will have less expense. In fact, there is every reason to believe that 1931 will be a better year for the farmer as well as the man in town.

The drought has wiped out much of the farm commodity surplus. Prices should be better. Industry in the big cities will not have completely recovered next spring, and our section of the United States should be able to attract willing workers at a fair wage. Normal industry doesn't hurt the farm, but the abnormal pace of recent years has undoubtedly taken people away from the agricultural regions and brought them to town, when they ought to have stayed at home. We will have less of this next year and the year after. In the great cities there are thousands of men and women who are thoroughly disillusioned. They may better appreciate the soil hereafter.

Aviation's Worst and Best Year

THE year 1930 is aviation's worst. It is, also aviation's best. Col. Clarence M. Young ought to know what he's talking about as he is assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics.

It's a bad year because production of ships has slumped, because there has been drastic price cutting, and because numerous companies are cracking up. It's a good year because the industry was heavily inflated, because the lethal competition among manufacturers has left only the fittest surviving, and because forced economies are bringing planes within the reach of the average man.

"The aviation industry," says Col. Young, "has gotten rid of its gold tinsel and gaudy ribbons and is down to brass tacks at last. For that we can be thankful. It has been up in the air long enough."

In 1927, when the stirring transatlantic flights had made the nation superlatively air-minded, there were 240 airplane manufacturers. The latest department of commerce records show 41 survivors. Late in 1928 it was confidently predicted that the 1929 production of planes would run around 10,000. Only half that number were built. During the first six months of 1930 the total production was 1,700 ships, including 350 for the army and navy, and it is unlikely that the year's mark will be more than 3,500.

Although plane production is decreasing, department of commerce records show that ships are being used more than ever. At present, United States transport lines are flying 100,000 miles daily with mail, passengers and express. Two years ago the total was 65,000 miles a day.—El Dorado Daily News.

A Modern Alexander Looking for New Worlds to Conquer

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NIA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Perhaps this story is as interesting as the general run of governmental, legislative and political news out of Washington.

Offhand, it seems at least as interesting as the daily doses of what the Republican press bureau is saying about the Democrats and what the Democratic press bureau is saying about the Republicans.

But any criticism of a possible error in news judgment will be cheerfully accepted.

Mr. Joe Gamble and Mrs. Lulu Mae Gamble, his wife, and Mrs. Elsie Davis all lived down in La Plata, Md., which is almost a suburb of the capital. They were plain, homely people. Lulu Mae Gamble was 45 years old, Joe Gamble was 38 and Mrs. Davis was somewhat younger than Joe Gamble.

Mrs. Gamble has given birth to 10 children.

The other night Mrs. Gamble stepped up to Joe Gamble's automobile and shot Mrs. Davis, who happened to be inside. Mrs. Davis has just died. Mrs. Gamble says she had repeatedly begged Joe Gamble to keep away from Mrs. Davis.

"Judge, he was over at her place before breakfast in the morning—the children knew and they'll tell you how I had to call him," she said. "He would be there half a day at a time. He took her places in his car. Last night I knew he was going out with her. I drove up to her front yard and said, 'Elsie, don't go out with Joe.'"

He Didn't Come Back

"She said she'd go if she wanted to. I saw him drive away there in his car. Then they went off together. I waited and waited and waited. He didn't come back. I loaded the gun. The two little boys stayed up with me. I don't know what time it was, but it must have been nearly two o'clock when I heard his car coming down the road. I knew it was his car. It was just mooting along—you could hardly see it move. I went across the road and waited where I knew they'd stop. Billy (12 years old) was with me. He can tell you about it. 'I went up to the car and I said, 'Now I've caught you at last. Right's right and wrong's wrong,' and I shot. I didn't shoot at anybody. I didn't want to kill anybody. I just wanted to scare her.'"

On the day Senator Nye moved his primary investigation to Nebraska, Senator Brookhart was predicting gains for the progressives. General Pershing was addressing the Fiduc convention, the Democrats of Maryland were renominating Governor Ritchie and the drys were razzing wet claims of a gain of 37 congressmen. But none of these things could detract the attention of the people of Washington from the case of Lulu Mae Gamble, Joe Gamble and Elsie Davis.

Another Shooting

Just a couple of days later Washingtonians had our own little shooting triangle, indicating that such things happen in the city as well as in the country.

Several hundred persons were sitting in the Earle Theater, a block from the Prohibition Bureau, when a few shots flashed and banged in the audience.

It turned out that Mr. Parker Bowie, 47 years old, had plugged Mr. Sylvester L. Fornwald, 40, who was watching a movie called "Maybe It's Love" with none other than Mrs. Bowie, the mother of Mr. Bowie's six children. As in the affair at La Plata, the principals were all of middle age.

Mr. Bowie, too, it appeared, had repeatedly asked his wife to stop going around with Mr. Fornwald.

"Mamma," said Mr. Bowie to Mrs. Bowie immediately after he had stopped shooting Mr. Fornwald, "I didn't intend to shoot him."

Lightning Tosses Man Four Feet Into the Air

BILLINGS, Mont., Oct. 9.—(UP)—A tale of being thrown four feet into the air when a bolt of lightning struck near his feet while he was at work was told here by Alex. Fox, 22.

Fox said the lightning scared his feet. He tried to cry out for help, but had been paralyzed temporarily. He said everything about him appeared to be on fire.

Gas Agreement Is Signed By 27 Now

Convention Has Now Been Accepted By Virtually Every Country

GENEVA, Oct. 9.—(UP)—With the adhesion of the Irish Free State 27 states now have signed the League of Nations' convention agreement to abolish gas, chemical and bacteriological, as means of warfare.

The convention, that was launched by the League in 1925 largely through the efforts of the United States, has not as yet been signed by the latter.

The signatory states to date are: Ireland, China, Denmark, Egypt, England, Canada, India, South Africa, New Zealand, Spain, Finland, France, Italy, Liberia, Holland, Persia, Poland, Rumania, Sweden, Turkey, Yugoslavia, The Soviet Union and Venezuela.

As the situation stands from the continental point of view, the convention has now been accepted by every important country of Europe, where wars have been the most frequent.

First Football Contest Will Be 'Played' Again

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 9 (UP)—Fifty "bewildered" athletes will re-enact the first intercollegiate football game ever played, that between Rutgers and Princeton in 1869, as a feature of the Pageant of New Brunswick, part of the program of this city's 250th anniversary celebration, October 12-15.

ONCE UPON A TIME

Looking through his opera glass at a concert, Emil Ludwig, noted author, saw a strange girl, immediately fell in love with her, learned her identity and persuaded her to elope with him and become Frau Ludwig.

son Field, gridiron of Rutgers University, which is less than 100 yards from College Field, the scene of the first battle. In addition to the 50 athletes—for there were 25 men on a team in 1869—there will be a crowd of students, men and boys from the town watching the game. All will be garbed in the clothes of the period, and the contest will be as exact a duplicate of the first one as is possible.

The pageant, of which the football episode is only one of nine actions, has enlisted a cast of 3,000. It is being directed by Percy J. Burrell of Boston.

Air Subsidy Saved Flying For English

Tided Companies Over the First Lean Years of Their Venture

LONDON, Oct. 9.—(UP)—The three years previous to the formation of Imperial Airways was filled with a number of commercial aviation ventures on the part of British and continental firms, none of which was any too successful.

Following the 19 days of inactivity on the part of the British planes in 1921 the first British government subsidy scheme was put into operation. By it, Instone & Company and the Handley Page Company flew on alternate days.

After six months the temporary subsidy was increased and the British companies began to fly every day to Paris. The Daimler Airway Co. was invited to join the subsidy scheme.

In 1922, division of routes took place. Daimler Airways were allocated the London-Manchester and London-Amsterdam routes, the latter with a link to Berlin in conjunction with the German-Aero Lloyd Company. Handley Page planes operated on the London-Paris route and Instone & Co. concentrated upon the London-Brussels-Cologne service.

Experimental services to Basle and Zurich and Cologne and Prague were prevented by complications arising through Allied restrictions upon German aviation.

After a short period of indifferent success the big moment in British commercial aviation arrived—the merging of all British air lines into the one State-aided enterprise of Imperial Airways.

Imperial Airways, its directorate under the chairmanship of Sir Eric Geddes comprising representatives from the four absorbed companies, together with government directors, is a $5,000,000 company which, during a period of years, is receiving according to graduated scales a subsidy grant from the State.

Shortly after the formation of Imperial Airways, daily services from London to Le Touquet and Paris were opened on a big scale. Connections were soon established with French companies to carry passengers, air mail and limited amounts of freight on to Warsaw, Istanbul (Constantinople) and Northern Africa.

During the past three months definite hook-ups with the Deutsche Luft Hansa lines of Germany have been made. The network of German lines now serves Imperial Airways.

Bulgaria Has Its Capone

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—(UP)—The government has matched its strength against Bulgaria's Al Capone. A warrant charging Ivan Mihailoff with inciting the murder of an editor has been issued. Mihailoff is the head of the "IMRO," Bulgaria's racketeering society.
